

University targets 'half-naked' students

* One of Zambia's top universities has urged female students to stop visiting the library 'half-naked' because it distracts male counterparts. 'It has come to our attention that some female students dress half-naked as they use the library, a situation which is disturbing the male students,' the notice in the library reads.